Organizational changes in DOP go into effect

RALEIGH | Several prison organizational changes went into effect with the beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1.

The Female Command, announced earlier in 2010, is formally re-established. It shifts the management structure for all of the Division of Prisons' facilities housing women.

All facilities housing the female inmate population are under the Female Command, and are no longer under the DOP's five regional operations. This new management model brings female units into one centralized supervision structure, similar to the existing five regions.

When the re-established command was announced earlier, DOP Director Bob Lewis said, "This concept will enhance our efforts to be more consistent operationally and improve our efforts to stay current nationally as it relates to female issues and best practices on the state and national level."

Lewis noted that the number of female offenders entering the prison system continues to increase, presenting a variety of unique and complex population management challenges.

"The re-establishment of the Female Command structure will be of major assistance as we continue to deal with these challenges," Lewis said.

Region changes

With the re-establishment of the Female Command, DOP adjusted the five male facility regions to balance inmate population numbers and mission within the five regions.

Wayne Correctional Center and Neuse Correctional Institution have been moved organizationally from the Eastern Region to the Central Region, and Harnett Cor-

DOC celebrates opening of women's treatment center

BLACK MOUNTAIN | The N.C. Department of Correction has strengthened its alcohol and drug addiction treatment programs with a residential center dedicated to helping females on probation and parole.

Gov. Beverly Perdue helped open the Black Mountain Substance Abuse Treatment Center for Women at a dedication on July 26. Numerous other state, regional and local officials, as well as private service providers, attended the ceremony.

"Alcohol and drug addiction are major contributors to criminal behavior," said Correction Secretary Alvin Keller. "This facility will give us a new tool to reduce crime and recidivism among women, getting them treatment they need before they end up in prison."

Females are one of the fastest growing segments of the state's prison population, and about half of yearly prison admissions are the result of probation revocations.

A residential treatment center in Goldsboro has served male probationers and parolees for more than two decades, but a similar facility for women had not been available. That changed May 10 when the Department of Correction and its Division of Alcoholism and Chemical Dependency Programs finished converting the former Black Mountain women's prison into a treatment center and began admitting residents.

Black Mountain Substance Abuse Treatment Center for Women is a 50-bed facility providing clinical substance abuse treatment for female probationers and parolees. It will ultimately serve as many as 200 residents a year, using a 90-day program.

Some of the residents are probationers whose court judgments ordered them to attend the treatment program. Other women at the center are former inmates on parole who are seeking to re-enter society successfully.

The center, funded through state legislation, is a long-awaited response to requests for such a facility from judges, legislators and probation officers.

The relocation of the former Black Mountain Correctional Center for Women inmates to Swannanoa in 2008 made a facility available for the new substance abuse treatment center. The center has 36 staff members.

Governor drops in at Tyrrell prison

'Women's Prison' has new warden

Bianca Harris

RALEIGH | Bianca Harris is the new warden at the state's largest prison for female inmates, N.C. Correctional Institution for Women (NCCIW). She succeeds Annie Harvey, who earlier was promoted to Female Command manager in the Division of Prisons.

NCCIW -- commonly known as "women's prison" -- houses 1,300 offenders, the largest population of female inmates in the state. All custody levels and control statuses are managed, including death row, maximum, close, medium, minimum and safekeepers. Also, primary medical, mental and alcohol and chemical dependency treatment are provided.

Women's prison is also the diagnostic center that serves as the point of entry into the prison system for all women sentenced as felons. In addition to being responsible for the facilities and operations, Harris will oversee the management of more than 650 correctional officers and administrative staff members.

Harris had been NCCIW deputy warden since 2008. Her entire corrections career has been at Women's Prison, beginning in 1993 as a correctional officer.

A 1991 UNC-Chapel Hill graduate, Harris has bachelor of science degree in criminal justice administration. She is an American Correctional Association accreditation manager.

Harris speaks to audiences about at-risk youths and female gangs and offenders. She also enjoys reading, writing and cooking.

Her parents are Joe and Doris Harris of the the Fort Barnwell community of Dover.

DOP changes, from previous page

rectional Institution has been moved from the South Central Region to the Piedmont Region.

Additionally, because of recent prison consolidations, Anson and Rowan correctional centers are no longer considered as individual minimum custody facilities. Anson is a satellite unit of Brown Creek CI and Rowan is a satellite of Piedmont CI.

Warren Correctional has new superintendent

MANSON | Joyce Kornegay is the new superintendent of Warren Correctional Institution, a prison that has approximately 975 inmates and a staff of 395.

Warren Correctional houses male inmates in close, medium and minimum custody environments. Most of the inmates are medium custody.

Previously superintendent at Durham Correctional Center, Kornegay succeeds the retired George "J" Haynes.

Beginning her corrections career as an accountant in 1983 at the N.C. Correctional Institution for Women in Raleigh, Kornegay advanced to superintendent at Umstead Correctional Center in Butner in 2006. Kornegay had been superintendent at Durham Correctional Center since December 2009.

An education major, Kornegay graduated from St. Augustine's College in Raleigh. She has completed the department's Correctional Leadership Development Program and Warden Training.

In her spare time, Kornegay likes to read, do water aerobics and cook. She also enjoys spending time with her family.

Rudy Foster leading Dan River prison

Rudy Foster

YANCEYVILLE | Rudy Foster, a 26-year Division of Prisons veteran, is the new superintendent at Dan River Prison Work Farm.

The minimum custody facility houses 570 male felon and misdemeanor inmates. It employs 187 officers and administrative staff members.

Inmate work assignments include food service, maintenance, janitorial and other institutional jobs. Other assignments include working on Department of Transportation road squads, working in Correction Enterprises metal shop, maintenance work at Caswell Correctional Center and the inmate construction program.

Foster, who was previously assistant superintendent for custody and operations at the Dan River prison, succeeds George Solomon, who was promoted to director of the Division of Prisons' Piedmont Region. Foster began his career as a correctional officer at the now-closed Guilford Correctional Center, and was named assistant superintendent at the Dan River facility in 2003.

A graduate of the Correctional Leadership Development Program, Foster is also a correctional instructor. The 1982 N.C. A&T State University graduate has a bachelor of science degree.

Wake Correctional Center has new superintendent

RALEIGH | Kenneth Royster, a 22-year Division of Prisons veteran, is the new superintendent at Wake Correctional Center.

The prison is a minimum custody facility housing approximately 410 male inmates and employing 107 full-time officers and administrative staff members.

Wake Correctional Center is primarily a "work" unit; 80 percent of the inmate population leaves the facility each day for incentive wage work assignments in various state agencies in the Wake County area. Approximately 50 inmates who are near parole or release participate in the work release program, leaving the facility to work for businesses in the community.

Succeeding the retired James Langston, Royster was previously superintendent at Raleigh Correctional Center for Women. He began his career as a correctional officer at the now-closed Triangle Correctional Institution. Royster has also worked at N.C. Correctional Institution for Women in Raleigh.

He is in the Department of Correction's professional leadership development program.

Forsyth Correctional Center

WINSTON-SALEM | Forsyth Correctional Center in Winston-Salem is a minimum security prison for adult males.

Forsyth was one of 51 county prisons for which the state assumed responsibility with the passage of the Conner bill in 1931. It was one of 61 field unit prisons renovated or built during the late 1930s to house inmates who worked the state's roads and interstates.

Today, the prison operates as a transitional center, handling an extremely high case of releases and specializing in transitional services. Inmates assigned to Forsyth CC are able to take advantage of multiple educational and vocational classes offered through Forsyth Technical Community College and Surry County Community College. Based on a partnership with Forsyth Technical Community College, professors and instructors from the college offer part-time and full-time classes for inmates interested in learning a skilled trade prior to their release. Surry Community College works with inmates from Forsyth Correctional to provide vocational training, as well as educational courses at Dobson Educational Center in Dobson.

Forsyth Correctional specializes in vocational classes, including HVAC, carpentry, electrical wiring, plumbing and automotive. Inmates are also able to take education courses through study release opportunities and the UNC Outreach programs.

Other on-unit programs at Forsyth include Alcoholics Anony-

One-fourth of the prison's inmates are assigned to work release jobs. Forsyth Correctional also supplies 11 Department of Transportation road squads and two litter crews. The prison also has various on-unit jobs as janitors, maintenance workers and kitchen staff.

The facility's chapel was dedicated in 1987 and was built based on funding from local churches in the community. Area churches also provide three full-time chaplains and two administrative assistants.

The chapel recently received the 2009 Joel A. Weston Memorial Award for Non-Profit Excellence. The chapel works with inmates and leads Sunday religious services that are open to inmates and their families. Religious programming includes two Bible study classes, Yokefellow, Gideons and Muslim services.

In addition, Chaplain Services has orchestrated numerous local, national and international outreach services, including relief efforts for Haiti and the Container Project. The Container Project allows donated long-bed trailers and short-bed trailers to be converted to provisional classrooms and schools for the Dominican Republic.

Foothills group schedules fall golf tourney

MORGANTON | The most beautiful time of year in the mountains is fall, and it will provide a dramatic backdrop for golf on Oct. 11.

That's when the Foothills Correctional Institution Employee Activity Committee will have a golf tournament to raise money for a variety of "giving" endeavors.

The registration deadline is Sept. 30. Contact Lowell Summey at (828) 438-5585 extension 220 for a registration form and details.

Silver Creek Plantation will be the site of the tournament. The course is at 4241 Plantation Drive, Morganton, NC.

Played in the "captain's choice" format, each team will have four players. The entry fee of $50 per person includes lunch. Each player can buy up to two mulligans for $5 each.

A shotgun start will kick off the tournament at 8:30 a.m. Oct. 18 is the rain date.

If enough players sign up, cash prizes will be awarded for first, second and third place teams. A prize will also be offered for a hole-in-one.

In addition to door prizes, the longest putt, longest drive and closest shot to the pin will also be rewarded.

The tournament is the Employee Activity Committee's major fund-raiser of the year. Proceeds support donations to area non-profits, the committee's community service project, flowers for a death in an employee's immediate family, retirement plaques for employees who have at least five years of DOC service, an annual staff appreciation meal and an employee Christmas event.

Brown Creek CI drill was a 'disaster' that went well

POLKTON | In conducting a disaster drill in May, Brown Creek Correctional Institution turned it into an interagency event, bringing in local emergency management teams and Red Cross personnel.

The mock event simulated the aftermath of a bomb explosion that caused extensive injuries and created air and structure dangers. The warehouse was the site of the simulation, and both staff and inmates were portrayed as sustaining injuries.

"We wanted to exercise the staff in responding to several emergencies, a bomb threat and subsequent explosion, making the exercise as real as possible," said Herb Jackson, prison administrator.

Outside agencies participating were Anson County Emergency Management and 9-1-1 center, Lanesboro/Polkton Fire Department and the Union/Anson chapter of the American Red Cross.

Participation by the agencies allowed the prison to introduce new elements to a disaster drill: Using 9-1-1 dispatchers; bringing a fire truck onto facility grounds; inspecting for heat and toxic fumes; working with DOC personnel in moving casualties to a triage/treatment staging area and to advanced medical care.

Moulage was used to create realistic injuries, allowing the medical staff to practice assessing and treating trauma wounds.

DOC personnel implemented the Incident Command Structure, allowing for enhanced communication between the incident commander and members of the operations branch (medical, security, fire suppression, etc.).

Observers from Brown Creek CI Operations and its medical office, Anson County Emergency Management and Lanesboro Fire Department reported that responding personnel "did an outstanding job and displayed professionalism in treating this exercise in a realistic manner." Staff members reported not only learning from the drill, and began to formulate changes in how they would respond to the "next disaster."

"This was the second time that Brown Creek had conducted a mass disaster drill," Jackson said. "Overall, from a custody standpoint Shift 1-B and medical did an exceptional job dealing with multiple outside agencies during this emergency exercise."

Lumberton Correctional salutes volunteers

LUMBERTON | Lumberton Correctional Institution recently hosted its annual banquet honoring the volunteers who serve the prison.

The banquet was held in the facilities' dining hall and featured a meal prepared by the inmates assigned to the kitchen.

Superintendent Sandra Thomas welcomed the volunteers and their guests to an evening filled with food, entertainment and gifts.

Division of Prisons Director Bob Lewis, guest speaker for the evening, gave a message commitment and encouragement to both volunteers and inmates in attendance. He presented a lapel pin to all volunteers at the facility.

Approximately 75 volunteers, guests and staff attended the event.

Gratitude was also expressed to the Lumberton Community Resource Council for its generous monetary donation to the event, to the kitchen staff and to the horticulture program for the flower and plants.
